 It is the editorial policy of the City to publish community news that impacts the constituency of Webster.

Focus on Finances

Shop Webster First

While “Shop Locally” is a common phrase that many cities use to promote their businesses, the refrain has special significance in Webster. Purchases made in Webster not only support local enterprises but also they generate the majority of revenue that pays for police and fire protection, parks, recreation, and other services that are provided to the community.

As the sales tax rate in the City of Webster is 8.25%, the total rate can be broken into three components: State, City, and Webster Economic Development Corporation (WEDC). The State sales tax rate is 6.25%, while the local (City) sales tax rate is just 1.5%. In 1999, WEDC authorized an additional 0.5% sales tax to promote and stimulate new and expanded commercial development in Webster. In essence, Webster’s portion of the sales tax is 2% of the total: 8.25%

With an annual budget of $9,828,110, sales tax provides approximately 60% of the City’s General Fund revenue. An additional $3,276,040 is received by the Webster Economic Development Corporation. For the sake of comparison, property taxes contribute only $1,880,510, or 11% of total revenues, to the General Fund. This ratio of sales tax to property tax sets Webster apart from most communities, as it is more common for property taxes to generate the vast majority of a municipality’s revenue. Webster constituents, therefore, benefit from the high concentration of retailers, restaurants, and entertainment venues located here and enjoy much lower property tax rates than surrounding cities.

Dependence upon sales tax, rather than property tax, however, brings more volatility to the City’s revenue base. For many years, the City experienced sales tax revenue growth in excess of 10%. Growth slowed considerably in 2008 to 2.3%, remained essentially flat in 2009, and declined 9.4% in 2010 due to an economic downturn.

The forecast for 2011 is more optimistic as new restaurants and retailers land in Webster. A modest increase in sales tax revenue is projected due to a gradual flattening of the sales decline at existing stores, combined with the newly established venues (see chart).

Just as sales tax is essential to the City, so, too, are prosperous retail establishments. The Economic Development Division seeks to attract new, vibrant businesses to the City, retain those that are here, and expand those seeking a larger footprint.

The refrain “shop Webster first” has significant import for Webster’s constituents who ensure that property taxes remain low while City services remain high.

Focus on Finances is a brief article on a specific aspect of the City of Webster’s finances. Its purpose is to provide an inside look at city government. Dragon Boats in Webster

Edgewater Celebrates Completion of First Phase Of Marina

The team paddling sport of dragon boat racing, which had its origins in China more than 2,000 years ago, is coming to Webster on Saturday, April 9. Edgewater, located just east of Highway 3 on NASA Parkway, is a master-planned waterfront community that is hosting the first annual “Edgewater Dragon Boat Challenge.” This day-long festival celebrating Asian culture will feature specialty vendors, cultural performances, professional kite flying, and dragon boat racing at Edgewater’s newly completed first phase of the marina.

The free, family festival opens at 8:30 a.m., and the first race, featuring the 40-foot long, 22-person boats, begins at 9 a.m.

World-Class Medical Center of the South

For more than a decade, Webster has held the naming rights for the “medical center of the south.” With Houston as the medical center of the north, Webster’s reputation for providing comprehensive, top-tier services to a super-regional population has grown, in accordance with the City’s expanding medical footprint.

Now, the 1,700,000 people in Webster’s medical service area who depend on exceptional healthcare, the latest in facilities and equipment, world-class physicians, and unsurpassed convenience afforded by the medical center of the south have much to celebrate. Not only is Clear Lake Regional Medical Center embarking on a $92,000,000 expansion and renovation project that will augment its women’s and children’s services, add a new patient tower, and enhance more than 40 medical specialties but also The Heart & Vascular Hospital has just completed its $17,000,000 expansion, and construction has resumed on the 375,000 square foot Bay Area Regional Medical Center hospital located at 200 Blossom.

While major cities feature clusters of top-notch hospitals, leading-edge medical support facilities, and expert physicians, Webster’s formula for success is unique. Within three of the municipality’s 6.7 square miles is a medical district that is characterized by its wide-ranging, complete menu of specialties and services, reputation for excellence, and easily navigable centralized location. The medical center of the south is perceived as the “go to” sector for a super-regional population who resides in 24 cities surrounding Webster. The exceptional quality and scope of services that are found in the medical center of the north are offered in Webster. However, in Webster’s medical center, easy access, free parking, affordable hotel accommodations, and myriad restaurants propel Webster to the top. For a burgeoning consumer base who seeks world-class healthcare, Webster’s offerings and convenience are unsurpassed.

Investment and Commitment

Webster’s medical service area population is growing due to the investment and commitment by the City’s healthcare constituents. By 2013, the number of patients who depend on Webster’s medical center is projected to escalate to 2,000,000, as a larger market discovers that Clear Lake Regional Medical Center features the only pediatric surgeon south of Houston’s medical center who provides a full range of surgeries for those just born to 18 years of age, or The Heart & Vascular Hospital is the only hospital in the entire region to have a hospital solely dedicated to cardiovascular services and offer the highly acclaimed Level III chest pain accreditation. In conjunction with the region’s steady population growth, which has escalated as high as 69% just to the south since the 2000 census, the medical center of the south is poised to accommodate a growing market and attract large numbers of patients who were accustomed to frequenting the medical center of the north.

With Clear Lake Regional Medical Center’s plans to begin a $92M expansion this summer with a scheduled completion for spring 2013, the region’s flagship hospital continues to demonstrate its commitment to excellence. A new three-story patient tower encompassing 154,470 square feet will be constructed to accommodate the latest technology and innovation in operating rooms, spacious pre-operating rooms for patients and their families preparing for surgery, and comfortable recovery rooms, along with a 30-bed adult intensive care unit.

Family-Centric Care

One of Clear Lake Regional Medical Center’s objectives is fostering unparalleled services for women and children or “family-centric” care. Already, the hospital has a stellar history of delivering over 4,000 babies annually and providing the region’s top neonatal care – complete with the area’s only Level IIIb neonatal intensive care unit. With the imminent expansion, over 79,000 square feet of the women’s and children’s center will be remodeled to accommodate new, state-of-the-art birthing suites, additional labor and delivery rooms, and dedicated caesarean section operating suites.

The medical center of the south

is forging new ground with its concentration on women's and pediatric services. At the apex of this initiative is the new pediatric surgeon who was recruited to Clear Lake Regional Medical Center from Pensacola, Florida. Dr. Stephen Kimmel who began practicing in Webster on January 17, is one of only 700 pediatric surgeons in North America. As the Pediatric Surgery Program was identified as a key component in enhancing many services that Clear Lake Regional Medical Center offered, new offices were filled with the latest specialized equipment and staffed with complementary personnel. With the advent of the only pediatric surgeon outside of Houston's medical center, continuity of care for pregnant women, newborns, and children is seamless and local. In an example of a pregnant mother with a fetal congenital problem, from the diagnosis to prenatal counseling to surgical intervention at birth, the mother's and baby's care is managed from one locale – fostering optimal communication and results.

Fulfilling a Long-Term Void in Webster

Prior to Kimmel's arrival, at a hint of pediatric surgical issues, the patient would be transferred to a specialized hospital in Houston's medical center.

Clear Lake Regional Medical Center's new patient tower enhances the Medical Center of the South's formula for success: world-class healthcare, easy access, and convenient, free parking.

Now, Clear Lake Regional Medical Center is, itself, a transfer facility. Patients from Kingwood to Beaumont to Lake Jackson are transferred by ground or air to Webster, where these young patients don't have to wait for weeks or months for elective surgery. Whereas nearly half of pediatric surgeries deal with the appendix, stomach, spleen, or gall bladder, Kimmel's prowess with laparoscopic surgery – which translates into minimal access, less invasive surgery, smaller incision, shortened hospital stay, faster recovery time, less chance of infection, and smaller scar – produces excellent results for complex, intricate procedures, too, such as esophageal atresia (to treat the esophageal tube that isn't completely formed in a newborn) or PDA ligation (to close a vessel to the heart – occurring more prevalently in premature infants). Kimmel cites an example of a pyloromyotomy in a four-week old patient, whereby three tiny incisions were made into the overgrown muscle at the end of his stomach to relieve the blockage. Within a couple of hours after the surgery, the tiny patient could eat.

The medical center of the south is keeping pace with the super-regional population it serves and the commitment to provide world-class healthcare. To accomplish this mission, Bay Area Regional Medical Center is, once again, under construction, and Clear Lake Regional Medical Center is embarking on another huge project that will transform the healthcare landscape.

Clear Lake Regional Medical Center's campus is expanding to accommodate its burgeoning service-area population.

Promoting the Tourism Capital

There are sound reasons why Webster's hotels now number 17 with over 1,500 guest rooms. Webster's perfect positioning midway between downtown Houston and Galveston beaches, Webster's 11-year exclusive partnership with Space Center Houston—the region's top visitor attraction, Webster's strong industry sectors for business travelers, like medical and aerospace, and Webster's innovative marketing campaigns translate into "heads in beds," or overnight stay for the municipality's hotels.

While Webster, like most cities with hotels, collects hotel occupancy tax based on a percentage of the hotel room charge, this tax is part of a highly restrictive special revenue fund, regulated by state statute, that must be utilized to promote tourism and enhance hotel occupancy in the City. Unlike most cities, however, what Webster does with its hotel occupancy tax is rather extraordinary.

For instance, Webster is one of the only cities in Texas to pay for the all-important blue logo signage for its hotels on Interstate 45. Since 1999, Webster has funded the special mainline and ramp signage for its eligible hotels under Texas Department of Transportation's "Specific Service Logo Signage Program."

This program consists of service signage along designated Texas Highways that provides logo identification and directional information to motorists for gas, pharmacy, food, lodging, and camping establishments. Webster City Council recognizes that this program represents a key vehicle for advertising and promoting the City's hotels.

In late February 2011, the City launched a billboard campaign to promote its hotels, since the blue logo signage program could not accommodate all 17 hotels. The bold yellow sign, featuring the hotel logos that aligns the City with Space Center Houston, directs motorists to exits 25 and 26 for accommodations.

The City recently celebrated its 11-year, award-winning partnership with Space Center Houston, NASA's official visitor center and the region's top tourist attraction. As Space Center Houston continually creates exciting, novel, distinctive campaigns, programs, and exhibits, Webster's hotels are the fortunate recipients of this innovation, as they receive exclusive, unprecedented, year-round exposure in brochures, website, media, and collateral.

The latest and largest version of Webster's acclaimed brochure designed to market hotels, along with complementary, comprehensive dining and entertainment venues, has just been produced. Webster's Dining and Entertainment Guide is featured at Space Center Houston, Webster hotels, visitor centers throughout the State, Webster City Hall, and on-line.

Myers and Gaines Receive Top Honors

Mayor Floyd Myers and Mayor Pro Tem Beverly Gaines received the designation of Certified Municipal Official (CMO) at the Elected Officials Conference in Austin.

The CMO designation is the highest level of advanced training offered by the Texas Municipal League Institute. In 2010, only 19 elected officials in Texas earned the designation.

While this is the tenth consecutive year that Myers has earned the CMO designation, Gaines has earned the designation for five consecutive years.
